

1) Songbird - music and lyrics - Vajra Yogini 2014

Songbird singin in the morning. Awakening the drowsing sun from his reverie. Cheerfully she trills, calling in the new day. Coloring the dawning with her song, a morning melody. Songbird winging over treetops warbling a merry morning song for the world to hear. "Awaken", she sings, "rise and greet the new day. Can't you see the weary night is gone, and morning is on her way!" "Wake up, wake up! Shake off your sleepy dreams. The rosy fingered dawn appears to sip the dew drops from the leaves, to kiss the flowers open, to paint the sky aflame. When she sits upon her golden throne the earth in colors sings her name." I look out my window and peer into the trees; the songbird singin sweetly, her notes they glide upon the breeze. Songbird, anointed with the morning dew, floating in upon the golden wings of dawn, awake to see the world anew. Calling all the dreamers to rise and greet the day, to venture forth into the light and sing her song along the way.

7) From a Seed - music & English lyrics - Surdas 2014

From a seed to a flower, and the rain of a summer shower we grow. From the love of the sun for the earth. All life is taking birth and we know. We are the fruit of this cosmic dance, a whirling dervish in divine romance and we spin. Atoms, stars, planets, and moons, spinning goddesses sacred tunes and we sing. Luminous sound flowing from our lips, galaxies created with every sip of each breath. From the root of the spine to the crown of the head, energy flowing on the sacred thread of the axis. Seer looking out from within, ever watchful of the spin that surrounds him. The mind dissolves into it's source, karmic destiny taking it's course lotus opening. Flower in the heart, seed of the soul, self awakening the final goal, bold as love. Be brave, be courageous, be spontaneous, be outrageous, be happy, be free...

8) Apus (mountain spirits in Quechua language of the Andes) - music & English lyrics - Surdas & Vajra Yogini 2014

Wind in the trees, smoke in the mountains, Apus and spirits whisper in our ears. Wise old men speaking words of wisdom, forever grateful...

Mist from the river rises, up in the morning. Birdsong greets me from every tree. Dew on the grass and flowers, diamonds shining, the beauty of heaven in all that I see.

The clouds up above burst open to shower down blessings, drenching the earth in blessings received. The sun rolls the clouds along, his light revealing, a rainbow's arc where sun and rain interweave.

There is a secret sun in everybody, the jewel in the lotus, the pearl of great price. You can't seek it here or there, you have to turn inward. Look in your own heart and you'll find paradise...
